

Random Notes

Reports from Vancouver early last week gave the news that the prices at the stockyards having risen to $28.00 per cwt., many housewives were reluctant to buy meat at retail butchers; in consequence, some butchers in the city had been forced to shut up shop.

Commenting upon this, cattle dealers were quoted as having said that beef prices had now reached their peak. Yet, as if to confound the prophets, best grades of cattle sold freely up to $20.00 cwt. on the Calgary market last Friday, and two loads fetched $30.00 a cwt.

It may be noted that the average price for good steers in 1947 was $14.25 per hundred pounds in Toronto, while in Edmonton it was slightly lower at $13.01. In 1948, average prices at these markets were respectively $11.76 and $11.16 per cwt.

If beef is too high, why not turn to fish?

The first ship of the halibut fishing fleet to dock reached the west coast port some three weeks ago, and at the auction sale of its cargo 28 cents a pound was bid by one wholesale buyer; a price which was well above the trade. Like the best beef, a large proportion of this fishing catch was destined for United States markets.

Meanwhile, following the law of supply and demand—consumers turning to pork for beef—pork prices are advancing.

There's no mystery involved in this steady rise in the inflationary spiral. Just as in home building, lumber prices are at an all time high, the practically unrestricted market offered by the United States to our cattle, coupled with a devalued Canadian dollar, renders the upward trend of prices inexorable. Enlarges on this side of the border and quotas on the United States side are, presumably, out of the question, so that it's no wonder Mr. Gardiner is disturbed by the prospect of a depletion of Canada's basic herds; and, if the present drought in central Alberta continues but a short while longer, it will probably hasten that depletion.

One measure lies at hand—one that might effect some amelioration in a perplexing situation; for while these conditions prevail and may get worse, indeed are getting worse, labor unrest is bound to continue.

A revaluation of the Canadian dollar is about due.

As everybody knows, there were two sides to devaluation; the imbalance in U.S.-Canada trade and the necessity of encouraging overseas buying of Canadian products.

But with a high level of income in the U.S. compared to that of Canada, consumers in the dominion have caught it coming and going. Devaluation has forced the prices of our domestic products to a high level, and when we buy from the U.S. we are made the other way.

To use a favorite vernacular expression, in spite of immense natural resources, Canadian consumers are sucking the blind test!

Railway Wages and Rates

The Country Guide, Max Iams, publishes an editorial under the heading "Railway Wages and Rates" in which it points out that the current application for a wage increase made on behalf of two groups of unionists will, if granted, add around $84 million to the cost of operating the railway. The justification based on a 6.8 an hour at a reduction in the work week from an average of 46.9 to 44 hours, would add $10 million to railway costs.

Says the Guide: "The new restrictions will fall upon the West and agriculture; the one industry that cannot pass increased costs on to the consumer will be the chief contributor."

Delia Branch Canadian Legion

A well attended meeting of above was held in the Legion hall on Friday eve., 16th inst. Com. C. Hergott, the president, presided; and Com. R. Bell, secretary, was in attendance. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. He also read various correspondence, and also gave the financial statement of the Legion. Some matters relative to the forthcoming sports were disposed of.

The main purpose for which the meeting was called was a proposition by the Farmers' Store that the Legion purchase the old Kennedy building for a Legion hall. A like offer was also received from F. Ormiston, Hanna, to sell the Legion his old grocery store building, but this was rejected in favor of the old grocery store premises.

After some discussion, a committee was appointed there and then to inspect the Kennedy building, and report back on the cost of probable repairs. On their return it was estimated that about $700 would be needed for repairs. Finally, a committee composed of Coms. A. Fletcher, C. Lawrence, and C. B. Hamilton, was appointed to meet the shareholders of the Farmers' Store, at their special meeting to be held on Saturday next, in the old store bldg., at 8:30 p.m.

After some further business was transacted, the meeting came to a close.

Baby bonuses, unemployment insurance, old age pensions, and other examples of government paternalism are made possible only through a sacrifice of a portion of present earnings by the people who are working in useful jobs.

In many ways the tax exemption system of bonusing babies was physiologically sounder than the monthly cheque distribution. It laid the stress on the money now, before the bonus was paid rather than on the bonus itself.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange

Director "The Crop Trusting Plan"

Increasing Use of Registered Seed

Year by year the use of farmers of Registered seed has been steadily increasing. This year's records of sales reveal that, in spite of the poor crop of last year high curtailment in buying of seed of thousands of prairie farmers, their use of good Registered seed was greater than ever before. This, of course, is a fact thing for the expansion of Canadian grain on the markets of the world, for the use of Registered seed, definitely improves the quality of field crops, hence of grain.

The major part of the increased use of Registered seed by farmers is unquestionably due to the device made of the idea by grain companies of making available the services of their 5,000 Elevator Agents to act as distributors of Registered seed between the seed grower and the farmer, and all without any charge to either grower or farmer. Elevator agents, it has been found, take a great deal of interest in this work while work, and by this practice grain agents are establishing confidence in the reputation and sale of Canadian grain on the markets of the world.
